

Loula Long COMBS

Loula Long Combs (1881-1971) was a renowned equestrian and horse trainer celebrated for her yearly appearances at the American Royal Livestock and Horse Show. According to her father, R.A. Long, Loula's first sentence was, "Please buy me a pony." She began breeding and training horses, which soon outgrew the stables at the Long mansion, and moved to Longview Farm. After her first horse show in 1896 at Fairmount Park, Loula went on to show horses for nearly 65 years, winning many awards at the American Royal and elsewhere in the U.S., Canada, and England.
